LETTER OF SUBMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE,
Washington, November 26, 1913.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a trade directory of South America compiled under the supervision of C. S. Donaldson, Chief of the Division of Consular Reports, from lists furnished by American consular officers. Since the publication of the World Trade Directory in 1911 the lists of South American importers and dealers have been thoroughly revised and rearranged according to uniform classifications. These lists are issued at this time with the hope that they will materially assist American manufacturers and exporters in developing the greater trade opportunities presented through the opening of the Panama Canal.

Respectfully,

A. H. BALDWIN,
Chief of Bureau.

To Hon. WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary of Commerce.

TRADE DIRECTORY OF SOUTH AMERICA.

INTRODUCTION.

The commercial and social relations between the United States and South American countries have been rapidly growing closer in the last few years. Only a generation ago North American travelers were rare in the Southern Continent, and their occasional lectures told of interesting regions with rich resources of which we knew little, but of which we are now learning much. South America has steadily developed, and this progress may be considered simply a basis for larger attainments. This is made clear by the fact that on its area of 7,000,000 square miles there exist only 50,000,000 people, while North and Central America with 8,330,000 square miles already sustain 122,000,000 people, with room for twice as many more. Although there are natural difficulties in bringing tropical lands into high productivity, South America has potential resources for sustaining in comfort and plenty several hundred million people. American business men therefore look wisely to the future in laying plans to become established in South American markets, in order to expand as the countries there grow. There should also be developed a mutually beneficial interchange of ideas—business, economic, and professional.

The United States sold to South America in the calendar year 1893 goods to the value of 34.3 million dollars. Ten years later the total had increased to 46.4 million dollars, a gain of 35 per cent. In the same period American exports to all other countries increased by 71 per cent. The trade openings in South America then became manifest and more efforts were made to develop that market. The result has been that in the last decade shipments of goods from the United States to South America have increased by 212 per cent, the total value in the calendar year 1913 reaching approximately 145 million dollars.

Another phase of the expanding South American market makes a still more favorable showing. Its purchases in 1913 from the United States were almost $3 per capita (50 million inhabitants), and consist chiefly of manufactured goods. The per capita purchases 10 years ago were only $1 (the population then being about 46 millions).

The following statistical statement is presented as of value in showing the progress of our trade relations with South America in comparison with the rest of the world during the past 20 fiscal years:

Fiscal years.	Imports into United States.			Exports from United States.[1]
	Total.	From South America.	Per cent from South America.	Total.	To South America.	Per cent to South America.

[1] Domestic and foreign.

The present revised directory of South American merchants and importers is an addition to the trade promotion publications of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

As the publication was prepared solely for the object of benefiting American export trade, it does not include the exporters and probable nonpurchasers of our commodities. Omission of the names of any business houses should therefore not be considered a discrimination. Furthermore, no financial ratings of the firms listed can be given, this information being available through banks and financial agencies. Use of this directory, and a careful study of other factors in market possibilities will permit the American producer and exporter to make connections for supplying merchandise to South American countries.

SYSTEM OF CLASSIFICATION.

The ease with which a commercial directory can be used is measured by the degree of uniformity in the classification of firms listed and by the extent to which subclassification is carried; but in the preparation of a directory of firms in South American countries, where, except in a few large cities, trade is not highly specialized and where many of the importers handle all classes of merchandise it is manifestly impossible to adopt a hard-and-fast classification or one giving the numerous subclassifications of dealers usually found in a commercial directory of the United States.

In the preparation of the lists of dealers the consular officers have followed, so far as practicable, a schedule prepared by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which embraced about 170 separate classes of articles. This schedule they have amplified or abridged, as they found necessary, to adapt it to conditions in their several districts.

Where possible abridgment of the schedule has been effected by the use of cross references; but introduction of the classifications "General merchandise," "General importers," and the like makes it unnecessary to list articles other than those of sufficient importance to be given separately even though handled by general dealers or importers.

The schedule as prepared for the consular officers stated in general terms the articles included in each of the principal classes and in addition listed several hundred more items, with cross references to the classes in which they are included. As it constitutes a practical finding index for users of the directory, the schedule is given in complete form on pages 13 to 23.

In deciding upon the inclusion or exclusion of names, the consular officers were instructed to bear in mind that this bulletin should be a directory of foreign buyers, for American sellers, and that manufacturers should be included only when they are actual or possible purchasers of American goods.

If an importing house listed in the directory is known to have a purchasing agent in the United States or other country, the name and address of the latter are given, in parentheses, following the name of the importer. If a branch house or firm is listed, the name and location of the parent firm are given in parentheses following the name of the branch house.

An explanation of the symbols used will be found on page 23, following the classification schedule.

FOREIGN TARIFF INFORMATION.

Answers to inquiries concerning tariff information addressed to United States consular officers can be expected only after the lapse of considerable time, and manufacturers and exporters will find it advantageous to make direct inquiries to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which maintains as a branch of its service the Division of Foreign Tariffs. The tariff work of the Bureau is not rigidly restricted to customs duties and customs regulations; the Division of Foreign Tariffs gives attention also to closely allied subjects affecting our foreign commerce, such as internal-revenue laws of foreign countries, the regulations for commercial travelers soliciting business abroad, and the requirements of foreign countries for consular invoices, merchandise marks, standards of purity, and the like.

The answering of specific inquiries concerning customs rates and regulations has come to be an important part of the tariff work of the bureau. To facilitate the compilation of such statements and to insure accuracy, inquiries should invariably be precise and detailed both as to the nature of the article and the particular country in which the inquirer is immediately interested. In foreign countries many articles are subject to customs duty merely on the basis of the component material, and the inquirer should always mention the component material as well as the nature and use of his products. When such detailed description is given the bureau is the more readily enabled to indicate the foreign rates of duty.

CURRENCY, WEIGHTS AND MEASURES, PACKING, CREDITS, ETC.

Among other publications of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that will be of value to those using the Trade Directory may be mentioned the following:

Factors in foreign trade. Miscellaneous series No. 7. States language used in foreign countries; currency, with equivalents in United States money; weights and measures, with equivalents in United States terms; postage rates; parcel-post facilities; list of countries in which international reply coupons can be used; equivalents of metric units of weight and measure; tables for converting kilos to pounds and pounds to kilos; table giving comparison of various pounds and tons; tables for converting foreign money into United States currency and vice versa; tables of price comparison for countries in which both the monetary unit and the units of weight and measure differ from those in use in the United States.

Packing for export. Suggestions for the preparation of American merchandise for shipment to foreign countries. Miscellaneous series No. 5. Contains general statements as to responsibility for proper packing, aim of the packer, methods of transportation, climatic conditions, port conditions, pilfering, marking of shipments; chapters on effect of packing, on customs duties, and packing of machinery. Section on South America includes reports from consular officers and commercial agents dealing with every country on that continent. The bulletin is illustrated and indexed by articles and countries.

Foreign credits, by Archibald J. Wolfe. Special agents series No. 62. A study of the foreign credit problem with a review of European methods of financing export shipments, supplemented with reports by American consular officers on credit conditions in their respective districts. In Mr. Wolfe's study are treated German methods of financing foreign shipments; English banks and the financing of exports through London; efforts in France to improve foreign credit facilities; credit methods of American manufacturers; aspects of the export credit problem in America; the banker's point of view. The summary of credit methods of American manufacturers embraces notes on hardware and general metal goods; machinery, implements, and engineering supplies; railway supplies; automobiles, vehicles, and accessories; electrical specialties; paints and oils; furniture, musical instruments, and woodenware; drugs and sundries; stationery and sundries; provisions; boots and shoes; notions and articles of wear; leather and belting; jewelry, watches, and clocks; miscellaneous goods. There are given specimens of drafts and other financial documents, a list of banks abroad undertaking the collection of drafts, and a list of banks in the United States financing foreign shipments. Consular reports are given from Buenos Aires and Rosario, Argentina; Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Para, and Pernambuco, Brazil; Georgetown, British Guiana; Valparaiso and Iquique, Chile; Bogota, Barranquilla, and Cartagena, Colombia; Guayaquil, Ecuador; Asuncion, Paraguay; Callao, Peru; Montevideo, Uruguay; La Guaira and Puerto Cabello, Venezuela. As there is no American consulate in Bolivia, a brief statement is given by Mr. Wolfe for that country.

Transportation rates to the west coast of South America, by F. J. Sheridan. Special agents series No. 72. The main part of the bulletin is a series of tables giving the freight rates on over 800 articles from inland points in the United States to inland cities in Ecuador, Peru, and Chile. Freight rates per 100 pounds, in carload and less than carload lots, are given to New York from Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Boston, Providence, and Hartford; ocean freight rates per 100 pounds and per cubic foot from New York to Guayaquil, Callao, Mollendo, Antofagasta, and Valparaiso, via the Straits of Magellan and via Panama; and freight rates per 100 pounds inland from Guayaquil to Quito, Callao to Lima, Mollendo to Arequipa, and Valparaiso to Santiago. Lighterage, transfer, and other charges at the port of New York and at South American ports are shown, together with the cost of marine insurance, and data are also given as to consular fees and regulations and steamship requirements. Comparative tables give the competitive rates from European ports and from New York to South America. In addition to these features statistics are furnished to show the character of the goods sold by the United States to Ecuador, Chile, Peru, and Bolivia, and for each of these countries general information is presented as to area, population, language, currency, postage rates, foreign trade, and distance from New York. Tables of price comparisons give the equivalents in the currency and measures of these countries of prices stated in the money and measures of the United States.

Lists of newspapers and other periodicals published in some of the principal cities of South America are given in this volume. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce recently issued a monograph entitled "Foreign Publications for Advertising American Goods," which gives a general idea of the cost of advertising in some of the principal foreign publications, the lines of trade represented, circulation, subscription price, etc.

The names of dealers and importers in railway equipment and supplies are also given in this Directory. In this connection attention is called to the monograph entitled "Foreign Markets for Railway Equipment and Supplies," recently issued by the Bureau.

A brief review of the information available to manufacturers and exporters in bulletins issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is given in Miscellaneous Series No. 12, entitled "Publications on South America," copies of which may be obtained by application to the Bureau.

SYMBOLS.

Manufacturers are designated by a dagger (†); importers by an asterisk (*). Names of dealers bear no symbol. It is assumed that importers are dealers, either wholesale or retail, or both. The symbol follows the name of the article if all the names listed under it are those of manufacturers or importers, as the case may be.

ARGENTINA.

Argentina, with an area of about 1,140,000 square miles, is divided into 14 Provinces, 10 Territories, and the Federal District of Buenos Aires. The estimated population of the country at the beginning of 1911 was 7,172,000. Of this number about 1,750,000 were foreigners, of whom about 845,000 were Italians, 425,000 Spanish, 105,000 French, 26,000 English, 25,000 Austrian, 24,000 German, and 17,000 Swiss.

There have been continued gains in the foreign trade of the country. The value of the imports increased from $263,000,000 in 1908 to $370,000,000 in 1912. The exports increased from $353,000,000 to $463,000,000 for the same period. During the 10 years ended 1912, the value of the pastoral products exported increased 68 per cent and the agricultural products 150 per cent.

The United States is third in the value of the imports into Argentina, following the United Kingdom and Germany. American goods entering the country increased from $37,000,000 in 1907 to about $57,000,000 in 1912. Some of the principal imports are textile goods, hardware, building material, foodstuffs, glassware and crockery, oils and greases, drugs and chemicals, lumber and manufactures, paper and manufactures, tobacco, electrical goods, and leather and manufactures.

BAHIA BLANCA.

Bahia Blanca, situated in the extreme south of the Province of Buenos Aires, is an important coast port and is accessible to large steamers. The manufacturing interests of the city, which has a population of about 80,000, are wool baling, brewing, beef salting, slaughtering, and sawmilling establishments.

BUENOS AIRES.

Buenos Aires, the capital of Argentina and the largest city in South America, is the principal port of the River Plate system and the chief business, manufacturing, and distributing center of Argentina. The total population at the end of 1912 was estimated at 1,428,000, an increase of 62,000 compared with the end of 1911. About four-fifths of the imports into Argentina are landed in Buenos Aires. It is the terminus of the principal railroad systems of the country and is the Atlantic terminus of the trans-Andean Railway to Chile. The American consulate general is located here.

ROSARIO.

Rosario, in the Province of Santa Fé, is situated on the western bank of the Parana River, or about 230 miles by river from Buenos Aires. It is the largest river port and the second largest commercial center in Argentina. It is the receiving port for the northern Provinces. The imports into the port amount to about $40,000,000 annually. Lumber represents the principal imports from the United States. Other important items are kerosene oil, machines and machinery, wire, agricultural implements, galvanized iron, and canned goods. There is an American consulate at this place.

BOLIVIA.

The Republic of Bolivia, the third largest of the South American Republics, has a population of about 2,250,000. The respective capitals of the eight Departments into which the Republic is divided and their population are as follows: La Paz, 78,800; Cochabamba, 24,500; Potosi, 23,400; Sucre, 23,400; Oruro, 20,600; Santa Cruz, 20,500; Tarija, 7,800; and Trinidad, 4,800. As the resources of the country are being developed, there is an increasing demand for manufactured goods. Of the total imports into the Republic, valued at about $20,000,000 annually, Germany supplies about 35 per cent, Great Britain 20 per cent, and the United States 10 per cent. The American goods consist principally of manufactured articles and foodstuffs. The building of railways and the bettering of transportation facilities in many parts of the Republic have stimulated the industries. The tin, copper, and bismuth mines of the country are among the richest in the world.

COCHABAMBA.

The city of Cochabamba is the capital of the Department of the same name. The population is about 25,000. Some of the principal articles produced in the city are cotton and woolen goods, leather, soap, and earthenware.

POTOSI.

Potosi is the capital of the Department of the same name. It is situated on the Cerro de Potosi, at an altitude of about 13,300 feet. The city owed its origin to the silver lodes which were discovered in the Cerro and which for a long time remained the richest silver mines in the world. Operations have been almost abandoned and the population has decreased to about 24,000.

BRAZIL.

Brazil, with an area of about 3,300,000 square miles, is the largest country on the South American Continent. The population is about 23,000,000. There were in the country at the beginning of 1913 about 3,660 industrial establishments, capitalized at about $275,000,000. Textile manufacturing occupies a position of supreme importance in the industrial development of the country. Other industries, such as the manufacture of sugar, tobacco, and cigars, jerked beef, beer, shoes, and flour, are progressing.

Of the total imports into the country the United States furnishes about 15 per cent, following the United Kingdom with about 25 per cent and Germany with 17 per cent. The value of the imports from the United States in 1912 was $48,000,000, compared with $34,000,000 for the preceding year. These totals include a large variety of goods. About 40 per cent of the Brazilian exports are destined for the United States. The American purchases from Brazil during 1912 were valued at $141,739,000, compared with $115,730,000 for the preceding year. Coffee and rubber represent about 80 per cent of the total exports of Brazilian products.

BAHIA.

Bahia, capital of the State of the same name, has a population of about 300,000. The city is situated in the eastern part of the State, or about 800 miles from Rio de Janeiro. The principal industries are sugar mills, soap and candle factories, distilleries, canneries, shoe and furniture factories, etc. The principal articles of import into the district from the United States are automobiles, barbed wire, clocks and watches, dental and surgical instruments and supplies, drugs and chemicals, electrical apparatus, firearms and ammunition, oils, hardware, and implements and tools. There is an American consulate at this place.

PARA.

Para, capital of the State of the same name, is in the northernmost part of Brazil. It is an important commercial center, being the gateway to the Amazon Valley, which supplies a large percentage of the world's rubber. There is but little agriculture or manufacturing carried on in the district, and therefore most of the foodstuffs and manufactured articles are imported. The manufacturing interests are represented by sawmills, shipyards, machine shops, brick and tile factories, soap factory, and coffee-roasting establishment. Population about 200,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

PERNAMBUCO.

Pernambuco, capital of the State of the same name, is situated on the extreme eastern point of Brazil. The general prosperity of the district depends largely upon the cultivation of cotton and sugar and the manufacture and exportation of sugar (refined and unrefined) and cotton goods. The imports from foreign countries into the consular district of Pernambuco amount in value to about $25,000,000 annually and the exports therefrom $15,000,000. The imports consist principally of jerked beef, coal, codfish, cotton goods, flour, kerosene, implements, and machinery. The population of the city is about 160,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

RIO DE JANEIRO.

Rio de Janeiro, capital of Brazil, is the second most populous city in South America. The port is the most important distributing point in the country. The imports for 1912 were valued at $120,150,000, or 39 per cent of the total imports into Brazil, compared with $93,660,000, or 36 per cent, for 1911. Some of the principal industries of the district are textile and flour mills, sugar refineries, furniture factories, foundries, and shipbuilding yards. The American consulate general is located at this place.

SANTOS.

Santos, in the State of São Paulo, is about 50 miles by rail from São Paulo city. Its harbor admits large vessels and is one of the most important, accessible, and improved ports in South America. It is the chief outlet for the southern coffee region, and has extensive railroad connections. It is the second port in Brazil in the value of its trade. Of the total imports into Brazil during 1912, 26 per cent, or $80,000,000 worth, were received at Santos, compared with 24 per cent, or $62,000,000, for 1911. Population about 38,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

SÃO PAULO.

São Paulo, capital of the State of the same name, is the second largest city in Brazil, having a population of about 450,000. It is 45 miles inland from Santos, its port, and 300 miles from Rio de Janeiro, the largest city of Brazil. It is an important railway center, having direct communication with Santos, Rio de Janeiro, and with the interior towns of the State and southern Minas Geraes. After the Federal District, the State of São Paulo is the most important industrial center in Brazil, and a number of the industries are centered in this city. Some of the principal articles manufactured in the State are textile goods, clothing, shoes, cordage, furniture, hats, cigars, soap, candles, chemical products, sugar, lard, preserved foods, beer, paper, etc. The State is the largest producer of coffee in the Republic, and therefore of the world. There is an American consular agency at this place.

VICTORIA.

Victoria, capital of the State of Espirito Santo, is about 400 miles from Rio de Janeiro. The port has communication by coasting steamers with various Brazilian ports, and is also visited by many vessels engaged in the foreign trade. It is an important distributing point for a large section of the State. Population about 25,000. There is an American consular agency at this place.

CHILE.

The Republic of Chile has a coast line on the Pacific Ocean of nearly 3,000 miles. The width of the country, while it expands, with its islands, to the extreme of 250 miles, hardly exceeds on an average 100 miles. There are a large number of rivers in the country, the majority of which rise in the Andes and flow to the Pacific, but owing to the limited area of territory between the mountains and the ocean these streams are necessarily short and rapid. The best protected harbors are located in the southern section, where numerous fiords and the protection of islands provide excellent harbors. Those in the northern section are largely artificial in character, and some of them so open as to offer little protection for shipping.

The country is rich in minerals, the most important being nitrate, from which the nitrate of soda is procured. Copper, gold, silver, and iron are also found. Agriculture, viticulture, apiculture, and the fisheries thrive, and there are extensive forests of cabinet and other woods. Coal mining is an important industry, the output amounting annually to about 1,200,000 tons, but not sufficient to meet local demands.

The imports into Chile from the United States amount in value to about $15,000,000 annually, consisting principally of machinery, coal and oils, paper, vegetable products, textile goods, and chemicals. Nitrate is the principal American purchase from the country, followed by silver and copper ores and iodine.

CONCEPCION.

Concepcion, capital of the Province of the same name, is a city of about 70,000 inhabitants, situated on the Bio-Bio River, about 8 miles from the port of Talcahuano, with which it is connected by electric and steam railroads. Some of the industries are tanneries, woodworking plants, flour mills, etc.; there are rich coal fields in the district. There is an American consular agency at Talcahuano, which section of Chile is developing rapidly.

IQUIQUE.

Iquique, capital of the Province of Tarapaca, is a seaport on the Pacific Ocean. Of the total imports into Iquique during 1912 valued at $13,835,924, those from the United States were valued at $3,404,871, consisting principally of grain, meat products, lumber, illuminating and lubricating oils, hardware, railway supplies, cotton goods, etc. The principal exports are nitrate of soda and iodine, of which the United States imports about $10,000,000 worth annually. About 95 per cent of this amount represents the value of nitrate of soda, of which there are rich deposits in this vicinity. Population, about 40,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

PUNTA ARENAS.

Punta Arenas, capital and only city in the Territory of Magallanes, is about 1,420 miles by sea from Valparaiso. It is nearer the South Pole than any town in the world. Punta Arenas is a distributing point for Southern Chile and a large part of the Patagonian section of the Argentine Republic, and it is an important coaling station for steamers passing through the Straits of Magellan. There is a regular steamship service with both Chilean and Argentine ports.

VALPARAISO.

Valparaiso is the most important commercial city of the west coast of South America, and is situated on a large bay about 115 miles from Santiago, with which it is connected by rail. Some of the principal industries are foundries and machine shops; macaroni, soap, perfumery, candle, and shoe factories; tanneries, woodworking plants, furniture factories, etc. The city with its immediate suburbs has a population of about 210,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

COLOMBIA.

The Republic of Colombia has an area of about 438,000 square miles and a population, according to the census of 1912, of 5,470,000. Coffee, cacao, sugar cane, tobacco, and bananas are successfully grown and largely exported, and the extensive forests contain a number of cabinet and other valuable woods and medicinal plants. Vegetable ivory and rubber are other products of export; also Panama hats, in the manufacture of which the natives have acquired considerable skill. The mineral wealth of the country has been but little exploited, although its emerald mines furnish the world's chief supply of these gems.

The total imports into the Republic for 1912 were valued at $24,000,000, of which the United States furnished articles valued at $7,600,000, made up principally of textile goods, food products, implements and machinery, drugs and medicines, china and earthenware, paper and manufactures, perfumes and soaps, oils and fats, etc.

BARRANQUILLA.

Barranquilla is the chief commercial city of Colombia. It is situated in the northeastern part of the department of Bolivar, near the mouth of Magdalena River in the Caribbean Sea. The principal imports from the United States are cotton goods, food products, metal manufactures, drugs and medicines, machinery, leather and manufactures, vehicles and accessories, and tools and implements. Some of the principal industries are shoe factories, distilleries, tanneries, flour mills, and shoe, soap, candle, hat, thread, textile, cigar, and furniture factories. Population about 50,000. There is an American consulate at this place.

ECUADOR.

Ecuador is the smallest of the Andean Republics, and after Uruguay, is the smallest in South America. The total population of the country is estimated at 1,500,000. Like Peru, it may be divided into four distinct regions with as many varieties of climate, soil, and products. In the lowlands cacao, sugar cane, tobacco, coffee, cotton, bananas, etc., are grown, while on the high plateaus wheat and other cereals and potatoes are successfully cultivated. Besides rubber the extensive forests contain numerous commercial products, such as vegetable ivory; cinchona, from whose bark quinine is obtained; the mangrove, the bark of which is used for tanning purposes; and the silk-cotton trees yielding the valuable commercial product known as kapok.

The principal imports into the country are foodstuffs, textile goods, hardware, machinery, clothing, leather, paper, arms and ammunition, cordage and twine, crockery and glassware, boots and shoes, oils, etc. The United States supplies about $2,300,000 worth annually of the total imports amounting to about $9,000,000.

PARAGUAY.

The Republic of Paraguay, like Bolivia, is an inland country. The population is estimated at 750,000, not including 100,000 Indians. The principal products are yerba mate (Paraguayan tea), oranges, tobacco, maize, and timber. Cattle raising is an important industry. The demands of the market are mainly for textiles, hardware, canned food products, beverages, haberdashery, drugs, and toilet preparations. The market is opening also for increased imports of agricultural implements, utilities for lumber camps, motors, pleasure carts, and footwear. Of the total imports annually, valued at about $6,500,000, American goods amount to about $350,000, of which hardware, provisions, drugs, and arms and ammunition represent approximately $250,000.

ASUNCION.

Asuncion, the capital and chief commercial center of Paraguay, is situated in the extreme western part of the country, on the eastern bank of Paraguay River, opposite the mouth of Pilcomayo. Population about 90,000. Some of the principal industries are rum distilleries, sugar factories, cotton and woolen mills, tanneries, etc. There is an American consulate at this place.

PERU.

Peru has an area of about 685,000 square miles, and a population estimated at 4,620,000. The country is traversed its entire length by the Andes Mountains, which afford mineral wealth in gold, silver, lead, quicksilver, copper, coal, vanadium, etc. Guano and petroleum are also produced in large quantities. Agriculture is carried on extensively in the districts west, and to much lesser extent in those east of the mountains. The principal products are, in the order given: Sugar, rubber, cotton, wools, hides, coca leaves and cocaine, rice, goatskins, coffee, and cacao. With few exceptions, all the important mining, agricultural, manufacturing, steam railway, electric railway, steamship, telephone, telegraph, and other similar enterprises have their head offices in Lima (which practically includes Callao), as do nearly all the large mercantile importing and exporting houses. Of the total imports into the country, valued at $25,000,000 in 1912, the United States supplied nearly $6,000,000 worth, compared with $4,500,000 for 1910.

URUGUAY.

Uruguay, the smallest and one of the richest Republics in South America, has an area of 72,210 square miles and a population of about 1,300,000. The country possesses a network of rivers, there being 700 miles of navigable waterways, nearly 500 miles of which are furnished by the Uruguay River and the Rio de la Plata. Stock raising is the principal industry, and agriculture is carried on to a considerable extent. There has been a steady increase in the value of the foreign trade of the country, as shown by the following statistics: 1862, $17,530,000; 1872, $35,500,000; 1882, $41,600,000; 1892, $45,800,000; 1902, $58,000,000; and 1912, $104,200,000. For 1912 the imports were valued at about $51,000,000 and the exports at $53,000,000. The imports from the United States during 1912 were valued at over $7,300,000 compared with $5,950,000 for the previous year.

MONTEVIDEO.

Montevideo, capital of Uruguay, is situated on a peninsula between the Bay of Montevideo and the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, about 120 miles east of Buenos Aires and 5,100 miles south of New York. There are a large number of slaughter houses in the Department of Montevideo, and live stock products are the principal exports. Other industries are flour mills, distilleries, tanneries, cigar and cigarette, soap, and candle factories, etc. Population in May, 1913, 362,299. There is an American consulate at this place.

[NOTE.—At the time this list was prepared the street numbers were being changed and the work would not be completed until about the beginning of 1914; n/v following the address indicates "old number" and should be noted on the address.]

VENEZUELA.

Venezuela has an area of about 450,000 square miles and a population of about 2,800,000. The country is divided into three distinct zones—agricultural, pastoral, and forest. Sugar cane, cocoa, coffee, and cereals are the principal products of the first zone; pasturage for cattle and sheep principally occupies the second zone; while the forests yield rubber, tonca beans, and tropical woods. Deposits of gold, silver, iron, copper, tin, coal, etc., are found in the Republic. Some of the copper, iron, and gold mines showed increased activity during 1912.

The imports into the country for 1912 were valued at over $20,000,000, compared with $18,000,000 for the preceding year. Imports of American goods increased in value from $5,200,000 to $6,800,000 for 1912. The principal articles were flour, cotton goods, lard, machinery, drugs and medicines, arms and ammunition, kerosene oil, butter, electrical apparatus and accessories, barbed wire, automobiles, canned meats, biscuits, and cement. Of the total exports valued at $25,260,000, the American purchases amounted to nearly $12,000,000, of which $8,550,000 represented coffee. Other important items were hides and skins, cocoa, rubber, and tonca beans.

BARCELONA.

Barcelona, situated in the northern part of the State of Bermudez, is an important commercial center. The principal agricultural products of the district are sugar, coffee, cacao, rice, cotton, and tobacco. There are coal and salt mines in the vicinity. Population about 14,000. There is an American consular agency at this place.

LA GUAIRA.

La Guaira, the principal seaport of Venezuela, is situated in the northern part of the Federal District. It is the leading port of entry for imports into the country and fourth in the amount of exports. A great variety of imports pass through La Guaira for Caracas and the adjacent valleys, and also for redistribution among the smaller ports along the Caribbean coast. Of the total imports into the consular district in 1912, valued at $12,476,000, American goods represented $4,121,000, consisting principally of flour, lard, drugs and medicines, cotton goods, machinery, kerosene oil, electrical apparatus and supplies, butter, and automobiles and accessories. There is an American consulate at this place.

MARACAIBO.

Maracaibo is the capital of the State of Zulia. It is the only port for western Venezuela and for part of eastern Colombia, serving a territory with a population estimated at 850,000. The commercial importance of the city is entirely due to its trade activities, there being no manufacturing of importance. The United States leads in the value of the imports into the district. Population of the city about 55,000. There is an American consulate at this place.
